

Comprehensive School Safety Planning Readiness and Emergency Management for Schools

A Three-part Webinar Series (Applied Learning Sessions)

This free series of courses is being offered across Washington State to all school districts. You may participate via a Zoom link or in person. The Northwest Educational Service District will also serve as a site for School Districts and Schools to attend in person.

Sessions are designed to improve and further develop district/school plans and reinforce best practices

FREE WORKSHOP SERIES

Primary learning objectives:

- Facilitate development of proper High-Quality Emergency Operations Plans (EOP) and Procedures (Annexes) for schools and/or districts.
- Assist in increasing effectiveness of existing plans via review and apply planning principles, requirements, and processes.
- Review planning principles & processes
- Provide reference materials to aid organizations who need to restart planning.

Questions to be addressed:

- What does your EOP look like (according to you)?
- What support or input would be helpful in improving the plan?
- What planning gaps or concerns exist?

Participants are encouraged to bring questions and have access to existing EOP and Annexes. Share examples with peers statewide through collaborative dialogue during the sessions.

ABOUT THE PRESENTERS

Mark Radonich has over 25 years of emergency preparedness and response experience in protecting public safety in training, planning, and as a responder. Mark is a skilled facilitator, building learning environments and organizations to serve their people and clients. Recently, Mark has worked in coaching responders, leadership development, cybersecurity initiatives, organization development and design, and helps public, healthcare, energy, and educational organizations strategize and implement their planning.

Susan May has been in the preparedness field for over 30 years researching, educating, communicating, participating, responding to and practicing the prevention and handling of disaster responses. She has devoted her career to ensuring the safety of Washington State citizens, neighborhoods, schools, businesses and government organizations. Throughout her career Susan has been involved with emergency response at the Federal, State and Local level.
